The pregnancy test was positive,
and she was sure about where to go.

The Women's Services OB Department

Even though Cameron Hitt and her husband were living in Fort Worth, they knew the drive to Granbury for OB care was well worth it. Cameron was confident in her physician and the staff at Lake Granbury Medical Center. Since she turned 18, Cameron has been seeing her Granbury OB/GYN and trusts him fully. She felt strongly about leaving the big city for her doctor's visits. "The [LGMC's Women's Services] department was quiet, which is unlike the ones in Fort Worth hospitals, and I received great one-on-one care." She recalled the nursing staff as being warm and friendly, treating her like family. "[My] nurse said I made pregnancy look easy," Cameron said with a smile. "I will have my next baby at Lake Granbury Medical Center." To read more about Cameron's experience and the OB services at Lake Granbury Medical Center, visit GranburyBabies.com.

Editor's Note

Hello Friends,

By the looks of press releases I've been getting from the Granbury Independent School District, this is a busy month for anyone associated with educating children — including their parents! Will they all have lassos and leather gloves when they bring their kiddos to Kindergarten Roundup? Ah, just a little humor before the new school year begins on August 26.

Although I loved school, being a divinely created academic and scribe, I do have memories from those years that bring a twisted smile to my face. Like my afternoons as an elementary school bus monitor. Volunteer work, certainly. In the days of platform sandals and culottes, my frame was tinier than now. I found my heavy, hard, wooden soles came in handy when I had to kick little boys in the shin to get them to be still and quiet. There!

Now you see my wry smile?

Thank goodness for maturity.

Enjoy your summer!

THROW DOWN

— By Erin McEndree

Janice Hobbs throws down a heavy lump of clay on the electric Randall potter's wheel. As her cat, Tilly, watches, she leans over and simultaneously kicks the wheel with her foot, while her hands move on the spinning clay. She talks to Tilly and presses and pushes the clay with both hands. The clay stretches and expands as Janice forms it into the creation she envisions. Among the vessels Janice makes are tea pots, mugs, mixing bowls and ginger jars. She creates ceramic frogs, lilies and whimsical cactus bodies.

Janice attended Kansas City Art Institute (KCAI) for a bachelor's degree. She affectionately calls it Ken City Art Institute because Ken Ferguson was the head of the ceramics department. Janice was influenced by Ken's philosophies. He evolved from strictly functional pieces to making pottery in his own unique style. "In high school, I knew I wanted to go to art school," Janice explained. "I chose industrial design as my major and ceramics as a minor. I flipped that after two weeks to focus on ceramics. School was very serious, and many students did not have the passion to graduate."

Much like Janice does today, Ken experimented with new elements of form and glaze. "There is a lot of chemistry involved, and I used to make glazes by the seat of my pants and see what the finished product was," Janice said. "Now I am more specific. I write the formula down and keep track of what I mixed." She is in the process of combining her tests on real pottery. There are test samples all over the studio including window sills, shelves and counter tops. Her experiments have extended to porcelain and white clay, but she admits, "Porcelain is very fussy." She tests the colors on smaller pieces as a guideline to select what color she wants later.

Janice received her master's at the University of Minnesota with Warren MacKenzie. He had a utilitarian approach to ceramics and made functional, wheel-thrown pieces with simple glazes. His art had an oriental flare. Knowing a teaching certificate would be a beneficial backup plan, Janice went to Texas Christian University. She used that degree for over 20 years teaching high school art at Mesquite and Joshua high schools. During that time she offered teacher workshops to give teachers hands-on experiences. She also wrote seven clay lesson plan books for teachers. For about two years now, Janice has been retired and has been transitioning back into the studio full time.

The 1,500-square-foot studio was the family's first home. Janice designed it as a studio and planned a brief stay until she and her husband, Ray, built their custom home on the hill. She did not plan, however, to be in the studio for seven years. "I did not plan it with a kitchen," Janice said. "For seven years, I got off work, picked up my son and picked up takeout food."

Janice fondly remembers moving into the new house 12 years ago. "It was still unfinished, so we set up the stove in the middle of the kitchen floor, and I cooked a turkey for Thanksgiving." The house on the hill was designed with art in mind. Janice erected a 20-foot wall that houses her coveted collection of pottery and art. She displays prints, photos and pottery from each of the five men who influenced her passion for pottery.

One of these men, Peter Voulkos, taught students to push the boundaries of pottery and find freedom in their craft. He pushed the limits by making pieces large enough to step in. "I could not afford one of those, so I bought a print from him instead," Janice said. Like Voulkos, Janice enjoys the freedom to create with no limitations — except the imagination. It takes skill to create what is in the mind or on a sketch pad. She has many sketch books. "I have to keep up with the times if I want to sell. I include magazine pictures as a source to see what colors people are buying," Janice said.

"I'm going to brighter colors instead of so much earthy tones." Her sketch books also contain formulas for glazes, diagrams of kilns and special mementos.

Other potters like Paul Soldner, Voulkos' student, and Don Reitz influenced Janice in the way that they evolved their craft. Through experimentation and investigation, they discovered what they could control and what they could not. Janice is discovering the same concepts as she balances technique and improvisation.

Janice makes her own clay to throw on her Randall wheel. "It's just like baking a cake, but with a formula instead of a recipe," Janice said. She buys bags of dry mix from Texas Pottery in Fort Worth. "It comes from England, India, China and Kentucky," Janice said. She pours dry clay and water in a huge mixer. Augers rotate and mix the clay to the right consistency. Janice feels the clay to see if it is ready. She also mixes leftovers and trimmings in a pug mill that turns it back into clay. The pug mill squeezes the clay into long tubes. "I have no cartilage in my wrist from working clay," Janice said. "Now I have a machine to mix it for me."

The last three years Janice taught school, she invested in large machines to minimize her body's aches and pains. She bought a 9-foot tall air-compressed clay extruder that easily makes cylinder, octagon and square shapes for mugs. "It works like a cake decorator," Janice said. She also bought an 8-foot long slab roller to evenly distribute pressure on clay to make flat pieces for bottoms and handles.

She invested in seven kilns. The big one has four propane burners and can fire up to 2,400 degrees F. It takes up to 24 hours to do a firing of pottery. Another kiln is for Raku firing. It is a Japanese word for happiness in the accident. For the Raku process, the vessel is removed quickly and immersed in water, straw or sawdust to create a crackling effect. The firing process has a profound effect on the appearance of the piece. During workshops, attendees can experiment with these machines to create their own pieces of pottery.

To display her pottery, Janice and her husband created a gallery by restoring a 1965 Avion travel trailer located right on Hwy. 4. "It took eight gallons of paint stripper," Janice said. "We ripped out the floor, too. I made display shelves for my pieces." It's the perfect retirement for Janice. Life is a little slower, and that's how she likes it. NOW

At Home With
Darrell and Carole Cockerham

Darrell and Carole Cockerham got married in 1964 — but not to each other. After 40 years of marriage, both of them lost their spouses. Carole’s husband passed away in December 2005. Darrell’s wife passed in January 2006.

For almost two years, each of them lived alone, she in Granbury, and he in Italy, Texas. But their adult daughters kept pestering them about meeting someone, urging them to join an online dating site. Darrell said, “Not gonna do it.”

Carole agreed. “It was too public,” she said. To appease their daughters, they finally agreed and signed up. Carole discovered Darrell’s photo in 2007 and boldly asked the question, “Are you dating around? Or, if you found the right one, would you marry again?”

“Of course I would marry her, if I met the right woman,” he replied.

They started out with lunch in Cleburne and dinner in Fort Worth. By the third date, he had introduced her to all his relatives. "I wanted to do that," he said. "I wanted to assure her I was real and not a married man with a family somewhere."

Her good looks and personality drew him in. She loved his sense of humor and ability to enter into conversation. With many common interests, they fit together perfectly. They married in August 2008. Celebrating their fifth anniversary, they both feel as though they've been married to each other for a long time.

Carole retired to Granbury with her first husband, seeking a place away from all the traffic. As they looked all around the Metroplex, Granbury was the only thriving community away from the bustle, yet close enough to Fort Worth for an easy commute. She didn't want to leave Granbury or live in Italy, so Darrell moved. "She had lived in her home alone," he said. "And I didn't want to live in a house full of memories anyway. We wanted to truly start over."

When they found their home in Harbor Lakes, most of the work was already completed, but they made a few changes to create a home built for them. The original back door, made fully of glass, became a door with a window and a dog door so their chocolate Lab has free access to go in and out. When the couple goes out to enjoy the patio, she waits expectantly for an invitation to join them and then pushes through her doorway.

The patio, a favorite place, has enough room for them to sit and enjoy the quietness of living near the golf course. Often neighbors drive up on golf carts and chat. When they first moved into the house a year ago, Carole sat on the patio marveling at the beauty of her neighbor's flowerbed. Before long, she missed having her own flowers. By July, she started digging up grass. Flowers and even some tomato plants line the back of the yard. Carole sees maintaining the yard as a hobby, including not only gardening, but also mowing and trimming the grass. “I enjoy working in the yard, and it doesn’t take much time,” she said. Neighbors sometimes tease Darrell about their arrangement. “I’m good to her. I started the edger for her before going to work the other day,” he good-naturedly replied.

Inside, a corner fireplace creates a cozy atmosphere in the living room. A 70-inch television is set in a cabinet built to match the molding around the fireplace. “Carole insisted we buy the large screen TV,” Darrell said. From the laughter, it isn’t clear whether the purchase was all her idea or not. He doesn’t seem to mind.

“The wall was just so blank,” she added.

Two dining areas flank the kitchen, where Carole spends quite a bit of time. She loves cooking, and according to Darrell, she’s very good at it. “I come home for lunch almost every day,” he said. Granite countertops along with a pot rack above the island give the kitchen a simple elegance. Purchased from Canton 15-20 years ago, the rack is one of the few pieces the couple brought with them. Their fresh start included new furniture throughout most of the home.

In one corner, a frosted glass door decorated with etching identifies the pantry. Opening the door provides a nice surprise. Instead of the anticipated small corner filled with shelves, the pantry stretches back providing a long space with plenty of room.

The refrigerator displays magnets collected from each place they have traveled together. The couple flew to Rome and took a 12-day Mediterranean cruise for their honeymoon. Darrell travels often with his job and always takes Carole with him. “I don’t go anywhere without her because I like her to be there,” he said. The look in her eyes confirms her desire to be with him as well.

The two extra bedrooms in the house share a connecting bathroom. Elegant tile lining the walls gives the bathroom a soft touch, with a gentle arch above the bathtub. The builder used arches throughout the house. A 4-year-old grandson dubbed one of the bedrooms as his when he comes to spend the weekend.

A small office at the front of the house contains a vaulted ceiling sectioned with beams, a unique addition to the home. A specially built cabinet displays a rock Darrell found while working in Mexico before he and Carole met. An authentic Indian painting decorates the large rock. The anthropology department of The University of Texas dated the drawing between 500 and 700 years old.

The master bedroom also has a vaulted ceiling with soft lights surrounding it. In the peaceful atmosphere of their room, the couple usually ends their day by watching a British comedy to unwind. The master bathroom includes a large walk-in closet with a built-in bench, perfect for sitting down to put on shoes. The builder also included many shelves in the closet and a full-length mirror. The room hosts an oversized walk-in shower along with a raised bathtub, two sinks on separate walls and many mirrors, including another full-length one.

Their lifestyle is extremely busy and includes spending many evenings at community events. When they're home, they prefer to relax. "We hold hands all the time," Darrell said. "We sit here just like this."

Carole moved closer, kicked her feet up on the ottoman and held his hand. "Except you usually have your feet up, too," she added.

They take dance lessons and go on cruises to dance. Although they love traveling, they always return to their home — a place meant to be lived in. NOW

Giving a Hand Up

— By Erin McEndree

With so many people in need of a hand up in Granbury and surrounding towns, Mission Granbury started in 1998 with a vision to provide resources to those in crisis and provide safety and stability for individuals and families. Five programs have evolved from its infancy. Mary Flores is the program director for one of the programs called the Emergency Assistance Network. Her mission is similar. She puts her heart and soul into improving the condition of people in need. She works with the large team at Mission Granbury to give people a new start and hope for the future. Mary helps people attain knowledge about personal healing and becoming self-sufficient. She is also passionate about getting the next generation involved.

Recently, Mary felt led to get kids involved after her daughter participated in a challenge from her Sunday school teacher. "The teacher gave each student $10 and told them to pray and see what God wanted them to do with it," Mary explained. "At first I was upset a teacher had given my daughter money; however, my daughter asked if she could do a can drive. She spent her $10 on cans and got her school involved. The school surpassed the goal by 300 cans." Thirteen hundred cans were donated in only one week. Mary realized if her daughter could get her peers to accomplish such a lofty goal, she could also inspire kids to make a difference. Mary wants kids to be part of something bigger than themselves and help others in their community. "I can see a difference in the kids at church since this challenge," Mary said.

Children's Charity, Salvation Army, United Way, private donors and churches, Emergency Assistance Network (EAN) gives hope to those suffering in the form of tangible goods. Because of donations, clients can receive assistance with their utility bills, prescriptions, food and clothing. The program also provides information on budgeting, counseling and putting homeless prevention into action. "For example, a 70-year-old lady took in her grandson," Mary said. "She was on a fixed income, so EAN helped her with the extra food and supplies she needed to take care of him." Last year, over 4,511 households were served by the EAN.

Two large components of the EAN are the food pantry and the New Beginnings Resale Shop voucher program. The resale shop provides new or gently used adult and children's clothes, which have been donated by individuals and local stores. Both areas are run by volunteers. "Jan and Dolly and so many other volunteers give of their time and put their heart into helping others," Mary said. Volunteers are always needed to sort items, set up displays, help people and run the cash register.

The food pantry is supported by donations, too. "I have seen people line up at six in the morning in the cold," Mary said. "They would not do that unless they had a real need." Some of the people in need are from small, outlying communities. "My heart is heavy for these little communities," Mary said. Granbury is a far distance for people who are struggling to travel. To expand services to these communities, Mary has met with pastors in Glenn Rose and asked congregations to volunteer and help with the needs through their church. Mary is also trying to expand the Granbury Mobile Pantry to these small towns. The mobile pantry provides food on a first-come-first-serve basis once a month.

Mary also organizes the Weekend Food For Kids for the Ninth Grade Center through Mission Granbury. Students who are in need of food on weekends or holidays are helped through the backpack program. Resource information for parents is also included. Mary was approached by individuals from school and the president of Neighbors Feeding Neighbors who asked if Mission Granbury would adopt the Ninth Grade Center and supply the food-filled backpacks. "I felt overwhelmed, but I prayed. God put kids on my heart," Mary said. "How could I say no? God provided volunteers and supplies." Mary gets volunteers from local churches. "Now we have so many volunteers we encourage them to get involved in other programs, as well," Mary added.

Using the opportunity to help ninth graders, Mary also challenged the ninth-grade art class to create a painting for Mission Granbury. She also challenged them to get involved and help fill the Basic Necessities Closet with essential items, such as toothbrushes, blankets, diapers and soap. The winner of the contest will have their painting displayed at the center. "I try to inspire people, kids and the campus to get involved," Mary admitted.

Getting kids involved is as simple as asking for help. "I asked a boy to help me unload donations and volunteer," Mary said. "Now he works with me every summer and brings more kids with him." Mary helps the younger generation realize they can make a difference in the lives of others when they open up their hearts and give of their time to serve others.

Squarely in her corner is her husband, Aniceto. Not only is he very supportive, he gives his time and effort to help others by accompanying Mary on her food deliveries. One time, he installed a window unit for an elderly man. "I could not do what I do without his support." Mary takes time to talk to people about getting involved all the time. She even talks to her daughter's friends about how girls can make a difference, too.

Under the umbrella of services is Education Outreach, where information is shared in the hopes that violence and abuse can be stopped before it occurs. Training on safe and healthy communities and schools is also available. "There are binders called Tools 4 Life that need to be updated on employment, education, health, money saving tips and other services," Mary explained. "My goal is to get those updated this summer, but I need volunteers to help make copies and be willing to demonstrate some of the tips to clients."

Over 14,000 people have been assisted by Mission Granbury through EAN program. Sadly, the number of those in need is growing. Therefore, there is always a need for people like Mary who have a passion to help others live the best life they can. Mary goes above and beyond by using her talents to lessen the challenges people face. "You don't take a position like this for the pay. You take it to give back to the community," Mary said with tears in her eyes. "I try to empower people with hope, because I can relate to their hard situation." NOW

Emergency calls are welcome!

Steve and Krista Streeter are teaching their children, Tyler, Austyn and Kailey, to work hard and give quality service, as do their team of trustworthy electricians.

Real Life Reliability

Streeter Electric guarantees their electrical work won't leave you short-circuited.

— By Melissa Rawlins

When the telephone rings at Streeter Electric, one of the owners always answers. Steve and Krista Streeter service Granbury households as a family. Tyler, Austyn and Kailey are training for real life in the home of a master electrician, Steve, who models integrity for his children. Their mother, Krista, became Steve's full-time scheduler, bookkeeper and marketing representative in 2011, a year after the couple founded the business in Granbury.

Krista had a business degree, and Steve had over 10 years experience as a union electrician in Michigan. Moving to Granbury to be near her family and to rear their children in a state where opportunity abounds, the Streeters merged their expertise and developed a business voted by locals two years in a row as Runner Up to the Best of Hood County award. Throughout Streeter Electric's three years in Granbury, their dependable, friendly service has built a strong and positive reputation for the licensed and insured company.

Steve's nickname, Super Steve, was given to him in 2002 by I.B.E.W. union co-workers with an electrical contractor where he went through a very strict educational process. Krista designed Streeter Electric's front door with their logo, which replicates the Superman symbol but uses a lightning bolt instead of the ubiquitous S. Krista's networking friends call her Super Girl, which is fitting, since she is definitely busy dispatching her clean-cut technicians, rearing the children, teaching fitness classes at the YMCA and, at the end of the day, working late hours with Steve, billing and invoicing and sending cards thanking customers for the opportunity to help them.

"At least 50 percent of our business is repeat customers," Krista said. "We get a lot of calls from people who ask us to add conveniences for them, such as outdoor lighting, ceiling fans and surround-sound systems." Having such repeat clientele is a result of Steve's focus on quality work for every customer. He has between five to 10 trained team members, who work on upgrades, as well as the new-home construction that makes up the majority of Streeter Electric's substance.

"I want others to be treated the way I want to be treated, which is why we offer fair pricing for every customer."

Wiring is always finished neatly, expressing the pride each electrician takes in their work. "There are no loose, flying wires, which makes it easier to trace a wire," Krista said, "and shows the consumer that the builder hires quality people to construct their homes."

Streeter Electric offers solutions to help with energy savings, from dimmer switches to LED light bulbs to power save units. As fall approaches, Streeter Electric recommends installing security lights, a safety feature for homes or businesses. Their crew can install timers or motion sensors on outdoor lights for those who do not like approaching a dark building.

No job is too small for Streeter Electric. "We offer a variety of other services," Steve said, who investigates each customer's situation and presents the appropriate solution. "I want others to be treated the way I want to be treated, which is why we offer fair pricing for every customer."

Since electrical circuits are one of the biggest hazards in any building, you should always hire a trained, professional electrician. Whether you are dealing with an emergency issue or an upgrade, Streeter Electric will send a professional to your home or business the same day you call. And remember their motto: "We do it without shorts!" NOW

“Millennials” in Good Position to Invest for the Future

If you were born anywhere from 1982 to 2001, or within a few years of this range, you are considered a “millennial.” As a member of this group, you share many things — cultural references, familiarity with technology, attitudes toward work and family — with others your age. And if you’re one of the older millennials, you and your peers have something else in common — specifically, you have a good opportunity to launch investment strategies to help you save for the future.

Why are you so well-positioned to invest for the future? For one thing, it’s because you have so much of the future ahead of you. As an investor, time is your greatest ally, for a couple of reasons. First, the more years you have to invest, the greater the growth potential of your investments. And second, by investing for the long term, you can help reduce the impact of periods of short-term volatility on your portfolio.

Furthermore, since you may be in the early stage of your career, you probably have yet to reach your maximum earnings and may be eligible to put the full annual amount into a Roth IRA, one of the most effective retirement savings vehicles available. (Eligibility to contribute to a Roth IRA is phased out over a specific income range.) When you invest in a Roth IRA, your earnings have the opportunity to grow tax free, provided you don’t start taking withdrawals until you’re at least 59 1/2 and you’ve had your account for at least five years.

Even if you do contribute to a Roth IRA, you can still participate in your employer-sponsored retirement plan, such as a 401(k) if you work for a company, a 457(b) if you work for a state or local government, or a 403(b) if you work for a school or other tax-exempt organization. And you should indeed contribute to your employer’s plan, because it offers some key benefits: Your earnings accumulate on a tax-deferred basis, and you typically fund your plan with pre-tax dollars. So the more you put in, the lower your taxable income. (Taxes are due upon withdrawal, and withdrawals prior to age 59 1/2 may be subject to a 10-percent IRS penalty.)

The amount you can afford to put into your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored plan depends on your earnings and other circumstances — but you should at least strive to contribute enough to earn your employer’s match, if one is offered. Otherwise, you’ll be walking away from free money.

All the money you contribute to your plan is yours, but if you leave your job before a specified vesting period — which often ranges from three to seven years — you may not be able to keep all your employer’s contributions. Check your plan’s rules to see how this applies to you.

Of course, since you, as a millennial, are in the early stage of your working years, you may well be on the lookout for new job opportunities. But if you are close to being fully vested in your 401(k), you might consider waiting a few extra months — or even a year — to take a new job, so that you can leave with the money your employer has contributed.

As a millennial, you’ve got time on your side as you invest for the future. So make sure you take advantage of all the opportunities that come your way. NOW

Debra lost 100.1 lbs. in 47 weeks.

Debra ~ Arlington, TX

"I have been big all of my life. All of my family is obese so I figured it would always be that way. I decided to do something about it. I tried many different programs, and I would lose at first, then I would gain it back over and over. I started checking into weight loss surgery and even got a credit card to have it done. I went for a consultation and knew there was no way I could be off of work that long. I saw a brochure at a local restaurant for DSC. I called to set an appointment, and as they say, "the rest is history." Everyone at DSC has been great, supportive of me and of my progress. I have now lost 100.1 pounds in 47 weeks. I am not to my goal, but will get there with DSC."

In The Kitchen With Jeff Pemberton

— By Melissa Rawlins

First trying wine in college, Jeff Pemberton began pairing various wines with different foods about 18 years ago when his architecture business took him to Napa Valley. He found he loved dry red wines. “However, I noticed that a dry or off-dry white wine went better with seafood because it is lighter tasting and did not overpower the fish, just as James Bond suggested,” Jeff said. Since then he and his son, Dax, have opened a winery in Granbury. Jeff often grills salmon, and pairs it with their Viognier, and other times enjoys their Tempranillo with steaks prepared medium rare. Jeff was 9 when his father invited him to help grill for friends. Now Jeff’s friends and family look for him to man the grill every Sunday night. NOW

Steak Pemberton

10- to 12-oz. steak, cut 1 1/2-inch thick
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. cracked black pepper
1 Tbsp. crushed garlic
1/4 tsp. seasoned salt

1. Set out meat to reach room temperature. Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper to taste. Cover the top of the meat with crushed garlic. Let rest until fire is ready.
2. Set gas grill at med-high. Or, if using charcoal, start the fire and let the coals turn white. Spread the coals evenly and place cooking grill in place. When charcoal reaches a 4, put steaks on grill and cook. To determine a 4, place your hand right above the grill and count the seconds until you reach 4; do not touch the grill.

3. Turn steaks 10 minutes after placing on grill. Sprinkle with seasoned salt. Cook 10 minutes longer.
4. Remove steak from grill; allow steak to rest for 4 minutes before serving.

Portobello Mushrooms Pemberton

1 tsp. shortening
4 medium Portobello mushrooms
4 Tbsp. raspberry chipotle sauce
1/2 tsp. garlic salt
1/2 tsp. garlic pepper
1 cup shredded Parmesan cheese
1/2 tsp. Mediterranean basil leaves (or 1/2 tsp. cilantro leaves for Southwestern taste)

1. Heat oven or grill to 275 F
2. Wash mushrooms; drain.
3. Lightly grease an 11x14-inch glass pan.
4. Place mushrooms gill side up in pan. Drizzle 1 Tbsp. raspberry chipotle sauce into the gills of each mushroom. Sprinkle garlic salt and pepper on each mushroom. Fill the gills of each mushroom with 1/4 cup shredded Parmesan cheese over the sauce. Larger mushrooms may require more cheese; fill gills. Garnish with a sprinkling of basil or cilantro for color and taste.
5. Cook at 275 F for 45 minutes or until all cheese is melted.

Dump Rice Pemberton

Serves 4-5.

1/2 stick butter
1 cup raw rice
1 10.5-oz. can beef consommé
1 10.5-oz. can French onion soup
1 4-oz. can mushroom stems and pieces
1 clove garlic, minced

1. Melt butter in 2-quart casserole dish.
2. Dump all ingredients into dish and mix.
3. Bake at 350 F for 1 hour.

Okra Gumbo Pemberton

1 gallon peeled tomatoes
3 bell peppers, chopped
2 large onions, chopped
1 bunch celery, chopped
1 Tbsp. celery seed
2 10-oz. cans Ro-Tel tomatoes
2 Tbsp. salt
1 Tbsp. chili powder
2 Tbsp. garlic salt
5 quarts raw okra, chopped

1. Mix all ingredients except okra into a large pan; cook for 10 minutes.
2. Add okra; cook until done.
3. Add 1 tsp. salt to each pint or quart canning jar; fill with ingredients. Seal jars in water bath sealer.
4. Serve this okra gumbo with all meats, as a side dish, or add shrimp, fish, sausage or a combination to make the gumbo a meal.
